

Woodford Reserve
Master's Collection
Four Grain

Batch #2, 46.2%

Batch #1, while a very good bourbon, didn't quite seem to reach its potential. The flavors were there, but were not integrated and as cohesive as I would have hoped for in a four-grain, pot-distilled bourbon. Batch #2 has realized this whiskey's full potential. The flavors I expect are all there, and they are more tightly integrated and polished. It really does taste different than any other bourbon on the market. I particularly enjoy its silky, creamy, nutty sweetness, which is balanced nicely with dry spice notes that peak on the finish. It's very soothing and enjoyable. A whisky for bourbon and scotch drinkers alike.
