

Lg4 Elements of Islay
(distilled at Lagavulin)

55.7%

Hard not to compare this to the 12 year old, as they are of similar strength and character. This is more about the peat bank rather than the shore, more eucalyptus than kelp. This pungent, earthy note is retained with water, alongside some brine. The palate is like carrageen moss pudding, with a touch of nutmeg at the end. Plenty there, but it all moves very quickly when I want it to linger.

That said, a solid performer.

£47/500 ml

—Vol. 23, #1