

Ardbeg Perpetuum

47.4%

“Ardbeg in Perpetuum” would mean “Ardbeg forever.” It’s made up of a mélange of different casks:

American oak, refill, French oak...and others. Intense, marine, with pineapple, wet moss, tar, cracked black pepper, and a nuttiness. The palate is oily, sweet, with smoked cream, balanced by a very pure acidity, then soot and char. Will the fact that it isn’t an extreme Ardbeg satisfy everyone? Probably not. Is it a bloody good session drink?

Damn right it is. (200th anniversary bottling)
