

Duncan Taylor

Octave (distilled at Aultmore)
2008, 52.7%

The recent official release of Aultmore means that malt lovers are finally aware of the distillery's intense grassy/perfumed character, and it is these characters which are prominent here, alongside a very light sherried note in the background.

There appears to be real complexity on the nose for such a young example, but water shows this to be the influence of the octave cask, which unravels slightly when water is added. Have it neat, and enjoy it a lot. £54

—Vol. 24, #4