

Highland Park Valfather

47%

Highland Park suggests this is its peatiest whisky to date. Smoky roasted malt notes on the nose, with singed wood and a slowly developing floral note. Initially, sweeter than expected on the palate, with vanilla and apricots, then dark peat, licorice, and treacle toffee notes appear. Black tea and black pepper in the finish, along with a hint of pineapple. £60

—Vol. 29, #4